Arrested-The Victim Dies in The Calaboose.

Mckinney "Squeals."

Samuel Turner, a wood chopper who lived two miles north of Thompson Station, died in the calaboose here Friday night between 3 o'clock and daylight. CoronerFritts, assisted by Dr. Ned Hutton, held a postmortem and found that death resulted from a fearful blow behind the right ear. There was a hole in the man's skull about the size of a silver

J. W. Swan, the colored barber who works under the Boston Shoe Store, said: "I came out of the shop about half past twelve o'clock that night and saw Joe Donnelly and another smaller, slim looking boy have hold of a drunken man bringing him along by Worrell's jewelry store. I went to the Ringo corner and turned south. They followed some distance behind me. I paid no attention to them until I reached the colored barber shop of Washington's, which is just south of the City Hall. I went in here and closed the door. After the three men passed going south I stepped to the door and took a look at them. I am certain Joe Donnelly was one of the three. The middle man appeared to be very drunk. I don't know who he was. Neither do I know the other party."

M'KINNEY "SQUEALS." Will Mckinney tells the whole story: He "squealed" before the Coroner's jury, composed of the following gentlemen: D. C. Wright, Henry Smith, Frank Kilgore, Henry Crews, W. H. Wallace and A. F. Gentry: McKinney said: 1"Joe ing of the death of Joseph Mc-Donnelly and I took Sam Turner Donald, says: Genial, jovial, bigdown the railroad. As we went hearted Joe Mc. is dead.
